YES, THERE IS SUCH A THING as low-key Mykonos. Far from the day-drinking crowds at Scorpios and Nammos beach clubs, the hotly anticipated Kalesma (kalesmamykonos.com; doubles from $1,438) just off Ornos Bay, will offer the glitterati a chic place to rest and recharge. The family-owned hotel comprises 25 suites and two villas, each set within whitewashed Cycladic structures and decorated with black lava tables and rattan armchairs made by local artisans. Wander down to the beach or explore the property's five acres of lush hillside, which spills over with aromatic herbs and wildflowers. On your way back, stop by the Pere Ubu restaurant, where a local baker makes loaves of horiatiko psomi (crusty country bread) that you can take to go.
